Outline two ways in which Tom's window cleaning business can be classified.

[4 marks]

It is a private sector business, as it exists to make a profit for Tom and his sister ✓ rather than a surplus for the government
It is a tertiary sector business because it provides the service of cleaning windows ✓ rather than producing physical goods

Each point is supported by a reference to the case study

Analysis

- You will develop logical chains of reasoning, showing cause and effect, impacts and outcomes

Example

- In this extract from a student's response, analysis has been demonstrated by chains of reasoning showing cause and effect, impacts and outcomes

Do you think important services, such as healthcare and education, should always be provided by the public sector? Justify your answer.

[6 marks]

Providing important services such as healthcare and education in the public sector ensures all citizens can access them. In many cases, these services are not profitable enough to be provided in the private sector, ✓ so few businesses would offer them
If private sector businesses provided them, services may be of higher quality. Revenue received by private schools and hospitals could be invested into better facilities and ✓ treatments, leading to better outcomes such as higher grades or health procedures carried out more promptly

Logical chains of reasoning are given, showing cause and effect, impacts and outcomes

Evaluation

Example

- In this extract from a student's response, evaluation has been demonstrated by a justified decision, which draws together earlier points

Do you think important services, such as healthcare and education, should always be provided by the public sector? Justify your answer.

[6 marks]

Key services are better provided by the public sector, as it ensures that there is access for all, irrespective of ability to pay. Significant government spending needs to be invested in them, but a healthy and educated population can lead to economic growth [E]. Leaving the private sector to provide them limits access to those who can afford them. This increases inequalities and restricts a country's ability to compete with other economies [E].

A justified decision is made, with clear reasoning

Putting it all together

- In longer answers, you will be expected to demonstrate two or more of the skills of knowledge, application, analysis and evaluation

Example

- This is an example of a full-mark response, highlighted to show how a student has demonstrated a strong command of all four skills throughout their answer
