Transitioning from an entrepreneur to a leader

- Moving from an entrepreneur to a leader can be a challenging transition
- The skills and mindset required to successfully launch and grow a business are often different from those required to lead and manage a team

A comparison of entrepreneurial and CEO leadership

Entrepreneur	Leader/CEO
• Brilliant tactician • Single-minded in pursuit of a goal • Unshakeable self-confidence • One-to-one persuader • Idea generator	• Brilliant strategist • Inspiring figurehead • Gravitas and presence • Able to reassure large groups • Idea prioritiser

- Some entrepreneurs are unable to make this transition and have to hire a CEO with whom they can work very closely to drive the business forward

Difficulties in transitioning from entrepreneur to leader

The need to delegate	Trust and verify	Learning to listen
• Entrepreneurs need to learn to delegate tasks and responsibilities to others • This can be difficult for entrepreneurs who are used	• As a leader, it's important to trust your team members to do their jobs effectively • It's also important to verify that	• Entrepreneurs are often driven by their ideas and visions • As a leader, it's important to listen to the ideas and their business	correctly and on time • Finding the right balance between trusting your team and verifying their work can be a challenge

Having an open mind	Being less reactive	Developing emotional intelligence
• Leaders need to be open to new ideas and willing to adapt to changing circumstances	• Entrepreneurs are often used to taking quick action and making decisions on the fly • As a leader, it's important to take a more strategic and measured approach to decision-making	• Leaders need to be able to understand and manage their own emotions, as well as the emotions of their team members • Many entrepreneurs are used to being driven by passion and enthusiasm rather than emotional intelligence and empathy
